"Green Gateway" presented by Minister of Economic Affairs

The economic vision of Aruba, embodied in one plan dubbed, "The Green Gateway" was of particular interest to practically every sector of our community. The minister's presentation brought representatives from every sector of commerce.

As a result of the world economic changes during the past 10 years the world has experienced significant changes. In the light of this development, Aruba has embarked on a path of innovation in order to develop a competitive and sustainable economy for the future. In the dynamic environment in which we live today, sustainable economic development will require innovation in the way we do business, researching new industrial opportunities, and increasing business productivity and investing in new opportunities.

With these developments in view, Minister of Economic Affairs, Michelle Winklaar-Hooyboer presented her mission to achieve a sustainable economic development through the use of the socio-economic resources of Aruba and our geo political position in the Dutch Kingdom. She believes we can help create economic conditions and capabilities through knowledge and innovation.

The competitive position of our economy is strengthened by our position in this region along with the help of information technology and our participation in international commerce.

Working together, the minister believes, we can achieve results in our investment in human resources, in the creation of jobs, in better education and in equality in the labor force. This will entail all economic partners working together, such as our consumers, businesses, investors and the government. We will have to focus on 4 different areas of coordinated action towards economic development. These areas of action are: national innovation, investment promotion, business growth and the empowerment of the consumer.

To realize this development, the government has taken a series of actions that will make a difference between now and 2013. One of these actions is the creation of the "one Stop Shop" concept for establishing a new business. Other actions are: the change of the laws regarding the setting up of a business in Aruba, the introduction of fiscal incentives, the creation of an investment platform, the promotion of Public-Private Partnerships integrating the Free Zone, airport, telecommunication and the financial sector. The government is intent on eliminating as much of the red tape as possible to create a more positive investment climate.

Actually, the list of actions taking by the government is very long. However, participants of the Green Gateway presentation came away from the presentation with positive feelings and with the conviction that we have a good plan and vision that can we can work on in the ensuing years.

Bitter battle over Peru presidency

LIMA, Peru (AFP) - Peruvian voters face a stark choice in tomorrow's presidential run-off between Keiko Fujimori, heir to an authoritarian president jailed for rights abuses and Ollanta Humala, a leftist ex-military man.

Almost 20 million voters in the mineral-rich nation stretching from the Pacific to the Andes and the Amazon must choose between the two most extreme candidates who won through an April first round but failed to win outright.

Humala, 48, and Fujimori, a 36-year-old right-wing congresswoman, have both appealed to around one third of the population still living in poverty despite a decade of economic growth.

Fujimori benefits from die-hard supporters of her father Alberto Fujimori -- the iron-fisted president of the 1990s now jailed for corruption and rights abuses during a clamp-down on leftist guerrillas but also remembered for reining in hyperinflation.

She served as Peru's first lady aged 19 after her parents separated and regularly refers to her father, even including his picture on campaign posters.

Surrounded by many of his allies, many fear she will follow in his footsteps and also try to free him if elected as Peru's first female president.

"I'm the candidate, not Alberto Fujimori. If you want to debate with me, challenge my ideas," she insisted in a televised presidential debate.

Nationalist Humala first came to prominence in 2000 when he led a short-lived military rebellion against former president Fujimori.

"Are you going to return the massive amounts of money which were stolen from the Peruvian people?" Humala asked Fujimori during the debate, referring to her father's "dictatorship."

Humala first stood for election in 2006, when he received loud support from Venezuela's anti-liberal leader Hugo Chavez before narrowly losing in the second round.

The media has played up ties between Humala and Chavez even though he has moderated his leftist image and now cites Brazil's former president Lula da Silva as inspiration.

His repeated rewriting of his platform, in a bid to appease investors, has increased uncertainty over how he would rule.

Around half the electorate who backed more moderate candidates in the first round prepared for an impossible choice tomorrow.

The last official opinion polls showed a virtual tie, taking into account margins of error, with Fujimori slightly ahead.

Business leaders and most of the media threw their support behind Fujimori, expecting her to maintain free-market policies.

But artists and intellectuals such as Nobel Prize-winning author Mario Vargas Llosa -- who compared a Fujimori-Humala runoff to a choice between cancer and AIDS -- opted for Humala, fearing that Fujimori would destroy Peru's fledgling democracy by returning to corruption and abuses seen under her father.

No proof vegies behind bacteria outbreak

ROME, Italy (AFP) - Scientific tests have failed to support the hypothesis that contaminated vegetables are behind a deadly bacteria outbreak in Europe, the EU's Reference Laboratory for E. coli in Rome said yesterday.

The laboratory, part of Italy's Higher Institute for Health (ISS), said it would be sufficient to follow basic kitchen hygiene to avoid infection, such as washing your hands after handling food and ensuring knives are clean.

The laboratory said the strain "cannot be considered mutant but rather a strain originating from the acquisition of new genes."

In Aruba too: women in our advertisements! - Part II

Let me conclude the article you read some days ago in this superb morning daily. In that first article we looked at the subject of the abundance of advertisements using women in today's media. It is no secret that advertisements are convincing and motivating tools which make a deep impact on the minds of viewers and molds the culture and attitudes of people. The excessive use of women, especially in subtly seductive ways, reduces the image of women to objects of passion and desire.

My take on this is that companies also have a moral responsibility in the society. They should make every effort, even in their advertising content, to present and or portray decency and good moral taste. Research has proven that these women-saturated advertisements have a negative impact on the society. They have caused problems to many women. They exert an enormous amount of pressure on women to strive to get the type of bodies they see in the commercials. They too want those almost perfect bodies or faces they see in the commercials. Many have gone to unreasonable extremes in their intent to become just like what they see.

This has caused many women to develop eating disorders like Bulimia or Anorexia. And, when they don't succeed in achieving their perfect body goals they become depressed and develop other long-term psychological illnesses.

These commercials have a negative impact on the society and leads to problems for the common woman. The major negative effect is the pressure on woman to get those near-perfect bodies. They get so pressurized that they take the unhealthy way to reach the goals they have set. They develop eating disorders; their health gets affected which may sometimes result in irreparable damage. And those who never make it to that point face humiliation and get teased by everyone around them. This results in depression and other long-term psychological illnesses.

Research has indicated that many women attest to the fact that many commercials lower their self-confidence. Because of the commercials, they see themselves as being unattractive as they compare themselves with the images being portrayed of the perfect women in the various commercials. When you look closely, you will observe that the weight of a fashion model in the commercials is about 25% less than the average weight of an ordinary woman.

Women viewers see themselves as inferior to the women on TV and in the movies. And, because of the way that men treat women in many commercials, women see themselves as the weaker sex. The impression that women get is that men are portrayed as the ones that decide their self-worth. Observers tell us that over-exposure of women as sex objects have triggered cases of physical assault and rapes. It would be interesting to do a research on the effect of this over-exposure of women in our local marketing. I am convinced that marketing should be designed to raise the status of women in the society and to give women the due respect they deserve rather than to degrade them with overexposure of their bodies. On the other hand, I must hasten to say that we can't put all the blame on the advertisers, because if women did not agree to be used as sex objects, I would not be writing about this matter today! If women would refuse to be the object of man's lust and greed...advertisers would have to use other objects to make money off. We need more women who would stand up and declare that they are supposed to be loved, respected, protected, and cherished and not succumb to exploitation for monetary gain....Aruban women too, if you please!

This concludes this topic. Write to me if this was helpful, or if you have observations or any queries: tonygreen.morningnews@hotmail.com.

Government reduces debt by 75 million, again!

ORANJESTAD -- At the outset of the presentation of the island's budget, Minister of Finance Mike de Meza explained how they have chosen a new system for presenting the proposed budget. He also explained the reason for choosing this new format. The Minister of Finance also described the financial situation of the government they inherited in September 2009 when they took up leadership.

The Finance Minister explained that the situation they inherited led them to introduce a special package to address the buying power, introduce various compensations especially for those most vulnerable in our community who lost their buying power by at least 23 to 30%.

In order to stem the tide of the problems, and to jointly seek solutions, the government met at the table with the trade organizations and worker representatives in the National Social Dialogue. The next step was to reduce government spending by terminating expensive rent contracts and introducing new legislation with respect to ministerial and Parliamentary salaries and benefits.

The government has decided to concentrate on quality and quantity, which means the beautification of the city center and the barrios.

One other important aspect that the Minister wanted to share with members of parliament is that the government succeeded, for the second year, to reduce the government's deficit by 75 million Florins.

According to de Meza, the 2012 budget is a responsible budget. We can discuss this budget and we may have differences of opinion, but we recommend that Parliament engage in healthy discussions regarding this proposed budget.

Despite challenges, Aruba's Tourism marching forward positively ORANJESTAD -- First quarter tourism results show a 5.4% increase in tourist arrivals and above 6% in Average Daily Roommate (ADR)...and Minister of Tourism Otmar Oduber is extremely pleased with these results for 2011. This increase is much more than the 3% that was envisioned for 2011 Tourism.

However, despite these outstanding figures, in the light of the world situation, the spiraling rise in petroleum costs and the fierce competition between airline companies, there are huge challenges in the aviation arena for Aruba.

The competition between the regular airlines, the so-called 'legacy carriers,' and the low cost carriers is very fierce. This fierce competition is forcing the 'legacy carriers' to lower their prices until this becomes impossible. When lowering prices cannot be sustained, these carriers then simply resort to eliminating certain flights.

According to Oduber, this is the situation that American Airlines faces at this time with the fierce competition they are facing especially from the New York market. The bad news is that American Airlines has decided to discontinue flights from New York to various destinations in the Caribbean as of November 11, 2011. Aruba happens to be one of the destinations of the Caribbean that will be affected by this decision by American. This will have a definite effect on our island. American's decision applies to Jamaica, St. Lucia, The Dominican Republic, Barbados and Puerto Rico.

Minister Oduber and our industry partners, such as The Airport Authority, AHATA, ATA and the Department of Civil Aviation are studying various possibilities which may be a rapid solution to this aviation challenge facing us.

Currently American Airlines has a total of 16 flights per month with Jet Blue 54 flights. In the month of April Jet Blue became the airline with the majority of passengers from JFK. Delta also has 5 flights per month from New York and from Newark we have flights from Continental Airline.

This is a real challenge for our tourism. However, the minister is convinced that through maximum efforts by all and in view of the positive results of the first 4 months of the year, we will continue to see positive results. Come November we hope to have a definite solution for this airlift situation from New York, says Otmar Oduber.

Aruba registers 10% economic increase

ORANJESTAD -- All principal indicators that can indicate recovery or no recovery economically, are pointing to a positive economic recovery for Aruba as evidenced also from the 2011 island budget currently under consideration in Parliament. The indications point to a positive economic development and a 10% increase in the first quarter of 2011.

The data available from the Department of Income Taxes indicate that all calculations are based on a 10% economic growth in Aruba this year. The Tax Department figures from an analysis conducted in April 2011 reveal that in the period from January to April 2011 there was a 12% increase in receipts compared to the same period of previous years. This means that the forecast of a 10% increase reflected in the 2011 budget is being realized in light of the figures indicating an important economic recovery for Aruba, according to Prime Minister Eman.

Eman cites that what is outstanding about the figures is that there is a 12% growth in income tax receipts. This, he claims, is because the government has not raised nor lowered the percentage that must be paid. This also means that more people have been employed and unemployment is down. Obviously, there have been certain salary adjustment which also accounts for the increase in the income tax receipts.

The report also shows an increase of 11% in the AOV and AWWA premiums. While the AZV shows a 23% increase (including the 2% increase of the tariff). This is due to a combination of factors and the fact that there is progress with respect to those who are employed. The increase of 12% in income tax receipts is an important indicator and will definitely contribute to reducing the government's deficit. It also indicates that the socio-economic situation is improving well.

The Prime Minister asserted that the economic recovery is being shared equally by all groups in our community, through the "recovery stipend," child support allowance, "indexing" and the increase of the welfare allowance. If the trend continues, the Minister is convinced that very soon Aruba will be sailing on smooth waters in the years ahead.

Japan firm develops 'sun-chasing' solar panels

TOKYO (AFP) — A new Japanese solar power device can generate twice the electricity of current models thanks to moving mirrors that follow the sun throughout the day, according to its developers.

Smart Solar International, a Tokyo start-up that also has an office in California, will start producing the system in Japan in August, hoping it will be adopted in tsunami-hit areas along the northern Pacific coast.

Sample sales are set to begin in October, with overseas sales targeting especially Asia and the Middle East set for 2014 or earlier.

The device features a row of aluminum mirror bars that can slowly rotate as the sun moves across the sky and reflect its light back onto a central tube that is packed with high-performance, multi-layered solar cells.

Its inventors say the system requires far less silicon — the most expensive component, which is imported mostly from China at the moment — than the conventional larger flat photovoltaic cell panels.

The tube has a system to prevent overheating, which reduces the efficiency of power generation, and the excess heat can be used to heat water.

Search giants make websites easier to find

SAN FRANCISCO (AFP) — Google, Bing and Yahoo are working together to enable websites to tag content in a way that lets search engines better categorize and prioritize the information in results.

The Internet rivals launched a schema.org initiative to promote a common format to "markup" Web pages with data detailing for search engines exactly what sites contain.

A variety of options are available to website makers when it comes to marking up pages, and the search engines believe a common standard will mean less work for publishers and more accuracy in ranking results.

"We want to continue making the open Web richer and more useful," Google fellow Ramanathan Guha said in a blog post.

"We know that it takes time and effort for webmasters to add this markup to their pages, and adding markup is much harder if every search engine asks for data in a different way."

The schema.org website was intended as a "one-stop shop" for website makers when it comes to creating the data tags to describe content to search engines.

"We want to enable publishers to give us hints about what things they are describing on their sites," Bing partner program manager Steve Macbeth said in an online post.

"We at Bing see this as a major step forward for the Web, simplification for webmasters and richer more informative search results for consumers."

Hackers claim new Sony cyberattack

WASHINGTON (AFP) — Hackers have claimed to have compromised more than one million passwords, email addresses and other information from SonyPictures.com in the latest cyberattack on the Japanese electronics giant.

The claim was made by a group of hackers calling themselves "Lulz Security," who published a number of files online containing lists of thousands of stolen email addresses and passwords.

"We recently broke into SonyPictures.com and compromised over 1,000,000 users' personal information, including passwords, email addresses, home addresses, dates of birth, and all Sony opt-in data associated with their accounts," Lulz Security said.

"Due to a lack of resources on our part we were unable to fully copy all of this information," the group said. "In theory we could have taken every last bit of information, but it would have taken several more weeks."

To "prove its authenticity," the group posted lists of thousands of stolen Gmail, Hotmail, AOL, Yahoo and other email addresses and passwords on Pastebin where they were publicly accessible.

Sony, whose online services have been targeted by a series of cyberattacks over the past few weeks, said it was investigating the latest alleged breach.

"We are looking into these claims," Sony Pictures Entertainment executive vice president Jim Kennedy said in a statement to AFP.

SonyPictures.com features movie trailers and information about films and television shows and also allows users who sign up to receive email updates.

Lulz Security, the group which claimed the attack on SonyPictures.com, said the data theft exploited one of the most "primitive and common vulnerabilities."

"Why do you put such faith in a company that allows itself to become open to these simple attacks?" Lulz Security said.

"What's worse is that every bit of data we took wasn't encrypted. Sony stored over 1,000,000 passwords of its customers in plaintext, which means it's just a matter of taking it," the group said. "This is disgraceful and insecure: they were asking for it."

7,000 people a day still catching AIDS: UN

UNITED NATIONS, (AFP) - About 7,000 people are being infected with AIDS each day and about half of the 33 million people with HIV do not know they have it, according to a UN report released to mark the disease's 30th anniversary.

The UNAIDS agency said more money, less waste and smarter programs are urgently needed to consolidate gains made in the war on AIDS and HIV.

The report highlighted spectacular progress made in the 30 years since US epidemiologists, in a study released on June 5, 1981, described the cases of five young homosexuals whose immune systems had been destroyed.

But UNAIDS said that about 34 million people were living with HIV at the end of 2010 and that nearly 30 million people have died from Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, or AIDS, in the past three decades.

The rate of new infections of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes AIDS has declined. But the UN agency said "the total number of HIV infections remains high at about 7,000 per day."

UNAIDS also estimates that about half of those with HIV do not know they are sufferers.

Sidibe, the executive director of UNAIDS said the worrying figures proved the need for wider scale testing which would reduce the infection rate.

"The number of people becoming infected and dying is decreasing, but the international resources needed to sustain this progress have declined for the first time in 10 years, despite tremendous unmet needs," UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon warned in the report which comes ahead of an AIDS summit at the UN headquarters next week.

On the downside, the global tally still fell far short of the goal of "universal access" that the United Nations had enshrined for 2010. That deadline came and went with another nine million badly-infected people still in need of treatment.

The United States alone accounted for 3.165 billion dollars in AIDS support in 2009, followed by Britain, with 658 million and the Netherlands with 389 million dollars, although Denmark donated most as a percentage of its GDP.

The report also pointed the finger at countries that were doing too little to prevent new infections, or failing to spend money in ways that would have the greatest impact.

In West Africa, scarce funds for prevention programs often bypassed sex workers or gays, whose HIV prevalence was 10 times greater than in the rest of the population.

New MRSA 'superbug' found in cows' milk, humans

LONDON, England (AFP) - An entirely new strain of the drug-resistant MRSA superbug has been found in cows' milk and people in Britain and Denmark, a study published on Friday said.

The previously unseen variant "potentially poses a public health problem," said lead researcher Mark Holmes, senior lecturer in preventive veterinary medicine at Britain's Cambridge University.

There was no general threat to the safety of pasteurised milk and dairy products, but people working with animals could be at risk, said the study published in The Lancet Infectious Diseases.

Dubbed a "flesh-eating" bacteria in media reports, methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) has emerged as a major threat in hospitals around the world, becoming potentially deadly when it infects wounds.

"Although there is circumstantial evidence that dairy cows are providing a reservoir of infection, it is still not known for certain if cows are infecting people, or people are infecting cows. This is one of the many things we will be looking into next," Holmes told a news conference on Thursday.

"Drinking milk or eating meat is not a health issue, as long as the milk is pasteurized," he said, adding that the process of making cheese also

"generally kills most of the bacteria".

Holmes said the main worry was that the new strain would be wrongly identified by traditional genetic screening tests as being drug-susceptible, meaning people could therefore be given the wrong antibiotics.

"Workers on dairy farms may be at higher risk of carrying MRSA, but we do not yet know if this translates into a higher risk of infection," Garcia-Alvarez added.

The team stumbled on the new MRSA bug while investigating mastitis, a serious disease which affects dairy cows.

The scientists also spotted a "clustering" of human and cow samples containing exactly the same new strain, suggesting transmission between cattle and humans.

The announcement of the new types of MRSA comes a day after the World Health Organisation said a lethal E. coli bacteria that has killed 18 people in Europe is "extremely rare" and had never been seen in an outbreak form before.

Health Tip: Prevent Back Pain in the Car

-- Traveling long distances in the car can take a toll on your back.

The American Chiropractic Association suggests how to keep back pain at bay during a car trip:

- *Adjust your seat so you're sitting comfortably close to the wheel, with your knees just higher than your hips.
- *Use a back support.
- *Take regular breaks to rest.
- *Stretch your toes, leg muscles and shoulders as you drive.
- *Keep hands on the steering wheel at the 3:00 and 7:00 positions, alternating occasionally with the 10:00 and 2:00 positions.
- *Keep a relaxed grip on the wheel, occasionally tightening, then loosening, your hold.

Port-au-Prince, Haiti : The medical facility Medecins Sans Frontieres, where many are treated for cholera, is pictured on June 2, 2011 in Tabarre, a suburb of Port-au-Prince. At least 10 people have died in a resurgence of cholera in areas near the Haitian capital, the country's health authorities announced. "We have registered about 10 deaths and 1,000 people have been hospitalized in Carrefour, south of Port-au-Prince," said Gabriel Timothee, the director general of the health ministry. The cholera epidemic has killed 5,332 people in Haiti and sickened 310,000 others since it broke out in late 2010. At its peak, several dozens of people were dying each day. A study published in March by the British medical journal The Lancet found that 800,000 people were at risk of contracting cholera in Haiti this year, and 11,000 were at risk of dying.

Film Director Jonathan Demme

June 10 to 16 is the dates for the second Aruba International Film Festival to be held here at The Cinemas at Paseo Herencia Mall. Periodic updates will be provided to keep the public informed of the activities surrounding this major event.

One of the giants in the film industry who will be participating here in Aruba is film director Jonathan Demme. One of Demme's Grammy award winning films is the Silence of the Lambs in 1992. Other famous films directed by Demme are: The Manchurian Candidate and Rachel Getting Married. Demme will be here to present his documentary, The Agronomist.

In The Agronomist, the primary personality is reporter and political activist Jean Dominique. The documentary recounts the take over of Radio Inter owned by Dominique in 1968, by the Haitian government, and his subsequent death in 2000 during political uprisings in Haiti's dictatorship era. The documentary also recounts how the US security services operated during the political revolution in Haiti.

Demme was born in New York. He is both a film director and producer, and also a prolific film writer. His own company bears the name Es-thetic Clinic. The ARVEFA World of Color – The Paint Doctor is in!

Aruba has had their own on-island paint factory for nearly 4 decades, which offers fashion-conscious homeowners some distinctive options when expressing their individual style through home décor. ARVEFA, is a division of the Antillean Paint Factory in Curaçao, which was originally started by Prins Bernhard, father of Queen Beatrix, and his partner Mr. Groen. This allows ARVEFA access to deliver custom made paints for industrial use, as well as the domestic variety they produce here on Aruba.

A visit to the paint factory reveals one very interesting fact; their employees and executives are passionate about their product, particularly Technical Advisor Otilio (Boy) Goeloe, whose years of experience with paint, and personal technical training have earned him the nickname “The Paint Doctor.”

“People come to me for advice for all their unusual painting problems,” explains Boy, who has 27 years with the company. “Aruba’s climate can be particularly hard on exterior paint; not only the intensity of the sun all year round, which will certainly fade the colors, but the corrosion that is always an issue for building close to the sea. The salt air is pervasive and will affect both exterior and interior metal in a short time. Customers also come to me when they find they must too frequently repaint, or have crumbling walls, and I explain to them the particular problems when building in certain areas of Aruba, and what they must do to overcome them.”

One singular service ARVEFA can offer is their custom color room, run by Hubert Leest, a 32 year veteran with the company. ARVEFA uses a system that scans in a sample of any particular color a client desires and then their computer software analyses the elements of the spectrum and devises a recipe to reproduce it exactly, which they mix up on the premises. “People bring us swatches of the strangest colors sometimes, but they want enough to paint their entire house,” he recalls, “no request is too big or too small.” Most paint stores deploy a common system to mix up a batch of paint selected from their many samples, only ARVEFA can go beyond that and produce vats of colors to exactly reproduce swatches, rather than having to select as close a match as possible from preset formulas.

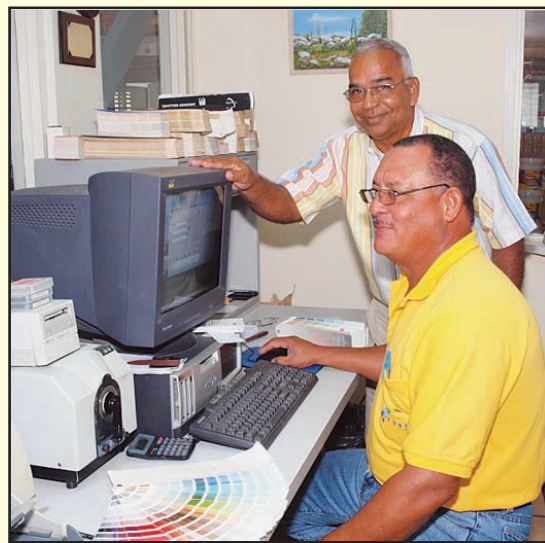

ARVEFA is also mindful of the trends in house décor and what is fashionable for an island such as Aruba, and is introducing their new Living Colors Collection of Comotex in June. Even neutral tones and whites have a vibrancy and flair; Boy advised this new collection for the small shopping mall attached to the recently renovated San Nicolas bus terminal, resulting in a lively and cheerful commercial center.

Aruba’s own paint factory still produces 5 types of the best priced wall covering on the island, both interior and exterior; discounts for 60+ when buying direct from the factory are now in effect. AREVEFA, Aruba’s own paint factory, is still the place to go when you need a little color in your life!

Obama after jobs data: long way to go in recovery

TOLEDO, (AFP) - US President Barack Obama admitted after the release of dismaying jobs data Friday that America still had a long way to go to salve the "sting of recession" and that "rough terrain" lay ahead.

The president, at a Chrysler Jeep factory in Ohio saved by his high-risk auto industry bailout, also mounted a strong defense of his economic policies, as signs of a slowing recovery clouded his 2012 reelection hopes.

"We have still got a long way to go, not just in this industry, but in our economy," Obama said, remembering "all our friends, all our neighbors who are still feeling the sting of recession."

New Labor Department data showed Friday that the economy added a paltry 54,000 new jobs last month, one-quarter of the February-April pace, in the latest release of worrying economic figures.

The politically sensitive unemployment rate, meanwhile, edged up to 9.1 percent, complicating Obama's message that he turned the economy around, as he and his Republican foes fire up their 2012 election campaigns.

"We still face some tough challenges, this economy took a big hit," Obama said.

Mentioning that US economic output had been hit lately by high gasoline prices and supply disruptions from Japan's quake-tsunami tragedy, Obama warned "there are always going to be bumps on the road to recovery."

However, he cited the 80 billion dollar auto industry bailout, which the White House said effectively saved hundreds of thousands of jobs, as an example of his economic policies working.

Obama used the rebound of the US car industry, after bailouts and government managed bankruptcies taken by General Motors and Chrysler, as a symbol of his wider economic policy and to repel attacks by Republicans.

"We could have done what a lot of folks in Washington thought we should do, and that is nothing," Obama said.

"We could've just let US automakers go into an uncontrolled free fall ... and that would have triggered a cascade of damage all across the country."

The industry has added 115,000 jobs since GM and Chrysler exited bankruptcy and, along with Ford, are now churning out profits and popular new energy efficient models.

EU calls on US to quicken Wall Street reform

WASHINGTON (AFP) - A top European official laid bare transatlantic tensions over banking rules Friday, urging quicker reform and warning Europe's patience was "running out" on at least one niggling issue.

During a visit to Washington, EU internal market commissioner Michel Barnier pressed the United States to fully implement laws aimed at mending the banking system - after shoddy practices plunged the world economy into crisis.

Warning of a "race to the bottom" if competing rule sets emerged, Barnier called on US lawmakers not to heed calls to water down or stall Wall Street regulation.

"Delay is not the answer," he said during a speech at the Brookings Institution. The former French foreign minister also warned that "incoherence and inconsistency between our rules will have negative consequences for our markets."

While much of the EU representative's focus fell on the implementation of a "Dodd-Frank" package of Wall Street reforms, his sternest criticism was reserved for the US alleged failure to implement international accounting rules.

"Frankly speaking, the patience of Europe is reaching its limits (on this issue)," he said.

Rousseff unveils Brazil offshore oil platform

Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff (C) raises both her arms during the inauguration of Petrobras' P-56 platform, at the shipyard in Angra dos Reis, on June 3 2011.

AFP PHOTO

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil
(AFP) - President Dilma

Rousseff inaugurated an offshore oil operation Friday in Angra dos Reis bay she said showed Brazil's capacity to develop its own energy resources.

The offshore platform, to be used for deepwater production by the state oil company Petrobras some 120 kilometers (75 miles) off the coast, was built entirely at Brazilian shipyards.

"We have proved that it is possible to build rigs, platforms and equipment" for offshore explorations, she said at the ceremony.

The $1.5 billion unit has 75 percent Brazilian-made components.

Brazilian engineers say the oil reserves in the vast salt-layer region may exceed 50 billion barrels, which would turn the country into one of the world's largest oil producers and exporters.

The depth of the oil find poses big technical challenges and will require enormous investment before the petroleum can be safely extracted.

NY oil prices ease after poor labor data

NEW YORK, (AFP) - Oil prices dropped sharply in New York Friday after the government released glum jobs figures for May, but recovered by the end of trading for a modest loss.

The benchmark contract, West Texas Intermediate crude, for July delivery ended at $100.22 a barrel, down 18 cents from Thursday.

In London the standard Brent North Sea crude added 39 cents to $115.84.

Labor Department figures showed the economy generated a paltry 54,000 net new jobs in May, one-quarter of the pace for the previous four months.

That sparked worries the economy faces an extended period of slow growth, and lower oil consumption.

Smith said that finally the market got a boost with the announcement that Greece had reached a deal on its bailout after long, tough negotiations with the International Monetary Fund, the European Union and the European Central Bank.

The lack of an agreement on what Athens would do to get the crucial next block of the 110 billion euro ($160 billion) rescue funding had cast a dark cloud over the EU region and the euro currency.

The Queen's offers an authentic taste of Aruba!

One of the distinctions of Aruban cuisine is incorporating unique indigenous ingredients such as in Wild Cucumber Stew and a particular light fish chowder accompanied by the local specialties pan bati (corn meal pancake) and funchi (the local version of polenta.) Thus, eating out at the authentically Aruban restaurant, The Queen's, is very affordable, with a true taste of regional cuisine.

Owner Varella Inno-cencia confesses she opened her restaurant in Oranjestad because "I grew up with this, and loved serving people our island food. My father and mother operated the little restaurant across from the Americana, which some may remember, the original Arawak. I remember how much our customers loved trying the local food, and they especially loved the prices!"

Varella's mom, Luisa, is still in the kitchen, conjuring up the delicious dishes that have been in her family for generations, which is acknowledged on the menu with "Carni Stoba di Mamachi"- "Grandma's Beef Stew," and their Arawak Steak.

We also bumped into island visitors Jim and Callie from Michigan, who were eager to try island food, and were more than pleased with their venture into local cuisine. "We will definitely return to The Queen's," they affirmed, "the food was delicious and the prices are more than right."

The menu sports a variety of steaks and tenderloin, fresh caught seafood, Caribbean lobster, and of course, one of our favorites, and what we consider a true test of local cuisine, "Keshi Yena"- "Filled Cheese." This is a tasty, filling stew of chicken, with other ingredients that are handy that day, all incased in a thick skin of melted Gouda. It was very satisfying and particularly memorable paired with The Queen's garlic bread and very special Pica, a mix of chopped onions and the famous local hot pepper, Madame Janette. Not overly spicy, it lent that perfect bit of tang to this deliciously picturesque meal.

Located next to the Harbor at the end of the Weststraat, The Queen's is open from 11:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m., daily, offering indoor and outdoor dining. They also have specials, aside from an extensive menu; made from whatever is in season.

We noticed a steady stream of islanders coming for lunch in the pleasant surroundings or picking up take-out containers; always a sure sign of a winner is where the locals like to eat!

Varella, Luisa and the next generation of chef

Buster's Garage in South Beach Center: One place for the whole family

Every seat is good seat for catching all the action. Open from noon for lunch or dinner, it has plenty of distractions for the younger crowd, including foosball, and a video arcade, so Mom and Dad can relax and enjoy their meal.

The moderately priced menu includes all your favorite finger foods and a great selection of local and imported beers. Customer reviews gave Buster's Garage 4.5 stars out of 5 on yellowpages-aruba.com; one declared "my wife and I happened to stumble upon it -but what a find!" Another stated "Owner Rusty is so down to earth. The food was very good and the prices were outstanding for the High-Rise area. Aruba needed a place like this."

Buster's regularly organizes special events with live music. At 10 p.m. it turns into a cozy adult hangout; 18 years and over only allowed, with a DJ on duty nightly and boasting the only beerpong table on Aruba. US coal film aims to put wind in green energy sails

LOS ANGELES (AFP) — A new film protesting against US coal mining and starring Robert F. Kennedy Jr. aims to boost green alternatives such as wind power and highlight "criminal" destruction by the industry.

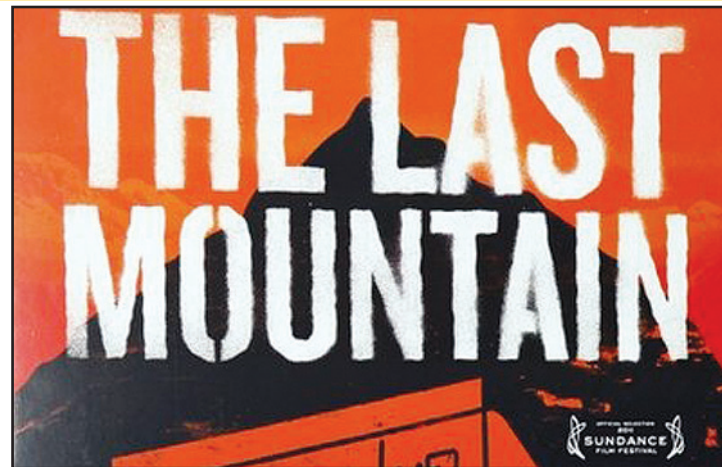

Five years after "An Inconvenient Truth," Al Gore's landmark movie about climate change, makers of "The Last Mountain" hope the documentary will engage viewers through the story of a Virginia community threatened by "Big Coal."

"An Inconvenient Truth" woke up the world to the dangers of climate change, in a way that it hadn't been awoken before," said director Bill Haney.

The film opened Friday in New York and Washington and will be released in other US cities in the coming weeks.

The movie tells the story of a community in West Virginia's Appalachian mountains taking on Massey Energy, one of the biggest coal producers in the US, trying to stop its practice of mountain-top removal to mine coal seams.

Kennedy, a member of the Signage on display at the premiere of "The Last Mountain"

storied US political family and a long-time environmental activist, is shown joining protesters in the Coal River Valley as they fight to preserve their health and the local environment.

"I was a little reluctant to get involved with doing a film just because I was more attuned to other kinds of advocacy and really didn't know much about filmmaking," Kennedy said, describing his initial reaction to the project.

But after meeting Haney he decided he could "articulate the link between democracy and environment," and help fight Massey in West Virginia, where he has long been involved.

Perhaps surprisingly, the movie gives relatively generous time to mining bosses and workers, asserting how vital the industry is for jobs in tough economic times.

While much of the film follows the protests -- including tree-top demonstrators and campaigners against the health impact on a local school -- it also shows people developing alternatives, such as building wind turbines.

Federer shatters Djokovic streak to reach French Open final

Switzerland's Roger Federer hits a return to Serbia's Novak Djokovic during their Men's semi final match

PARIS (AFP) – Roger Federer brought Novak Djokovic's 43-match winning run to a sensational end Friday as the Swiss legend reached a fifth French Open final and a fourth Paris title showdown with five-time champion Rafael Nadal.

Federer, the 2009 winner, stunned the world number two Serb 7-6 (7/5), 6-3, 3-6, 7-6 (7/5), a victory which not only shattered Djokovic's hopes of making a first Roland Garros final, but also stalled his bid to take over as world number one.

World number three Federer, whose last Grand Slam final had been at the 2010 Australian Open where he wrapped up a 16th major title, sealed a memorable win with his 18th ace in a tie which finished at 2135 (1935GMT) in gathering gloom.

Having reached his sixth Roland Garros semi-final playing a carefree brand of no-pressure tennis, he also left Djokovic one win short of matching John McEnroe's 1984 record of a 42-match unbeaten start to a season.

In a rollercoaster of a first set, Djokovic was surprisingly broken in the first game, distracted by the commotion in the crowd behind him caused when a spectator collapsed.

But the Serb was back on level terms for 1-1 with a break back before fighting off four break points on his next serve to hold for 2-1.

A huge inside-out backhand gave Djokovic another break for a 4-2 lead but Federer, with a roar of emotional support behind him, stormed back, retrieving the break and holding to love for 4-4.

Federer saved two set points in the 11th game before Djokovic, furious at being handed a time violation by French umpire Damien Dumousois, got the better of a gruelling 27-shot rally to hold and lead 6-5.

The Swiss, who had converted just two of 10 break points in the opener, held to send the set into a tiebreak which he claimed when Djokovic netted a forehand after 70 minutes on court.

Federer fought off two break points in the first game of the second set and broke Djokovic to lead 3-1 when the Serb, clearly unsettled and distinctly under par, ballooned a forehand long.

A rattled Djokovic soon trailed 4-1 and then needed to fight off four break points in the sixth game to keep his campaign on track before Federer, nerveless on serve, stretched his advantage to 5-2.

The world number two was close to breaking point and fought off five set points in the eighth game.

But the 29-year-old Federer was soon two sets to love ahead when a weary Djokovic netted.

Under siege, Djokovic had given up a further 12 break points in the second set with Federer crucially converting the only one he needed to do in the fourth game.

However, showing the fight which has brought him seven titles in 2011, Djokovic carved out the only break of the third set in the second game on his way to cutting the deficit.

Serve dominated in the fourth set as the sky over Paris became increasingly darker, before Djokovic unleashed a brutal service return to break for a 5-4 lead.

In an enthralling conclusion, Federer hit back for 5-5 and fought off two break points to nip ahead at 6-5 before Djokovic held for a tie break.

The Serb saved two match points but was powerless to keep out the Swiss star's 18th ace which sealed the semi-final after 3hr and 39mins of enthralling action.

NFL players, owners make case before appeals court

ST. LOUIS, Missouri (AFP) – NFL owners and players renewed their arguing in a court hearing on Friday with no end in sight to an ongoing lockout and barely two months before the first scheduled NFL pre-season game.

Each side made its case before the US Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals on Friday regarding the lockout as a three-month-old bargaining stalemate threatens to delay, shorten or wipe out the 2011 gridiron campaign altogether.

The three-member judicial panel spent 30 minutes hearing from the NFL why it should overturn a Minnesota judge's order to halt the lockout, an order the appeals judges have twice voted to put on hold until they make a decision.

Players argued for 30 minutes that the first NFL shutdown since 1987 is not legal and they should be free to return to team facilities, begin pre-season work with coaches and trainers and prepare for a July start of training camps.

The side favored in a decision will have an upper hand in talks, with owners under pressure for new terms if they are forced to play a season and players facing a protracted legal fight with no games if they lose.

Appeals court judge Kermit Bye let both sides know he, like most NFL fans, would welcome a settlement at the negotiating table that would render the lockout issue moot.

Billionaire club owners and multi-millionaire players could not agree on how to divide $9.1 billion in annual revenues, prompting players to decertify their union in March and press an anti-trust court fight.

Owners, who wanted more than $1 billion in givebacks from players, want the emphasis on getting back to talks with players, such as three days of secret meetings that were revealed Thursday, and hammering out terms of a new deal.

US Judge Susan Richard Nelson lifted the lockout on April 25, siding with players who said it was illegal and causing the players irreparable damage, but the NFL went to the appeals court and it twice voted 2-1 to sustain a lockout, setting the stage for Friday's hearing.

IndyCar to use road course for Japan farewell

INDIANAPOLIS, Indiana (AFP) – Earthquake damage to the oval course at Twin Ring Motegi complex will force IndyCar to run its final race at the Japanese track on a 2.98-mile road course, series officials said Friday.

IndyCar announced before the season began that the September 18 race would be the last to be staged at the Japanese motorsports facility, which has hosted open-wheel races since 1998.

Previous events have been conducted on the 1.5-mile oval circuit but raised ridges on the track in the wake of the earthquakes last March will force the Indy Japan 300 to a natural terrain layout instead of a final run on the oval.

"We have made the decision to move forward with our race in Motegi after closely monitoring the ongoing situation in Japan for several months," IndyCar chief executive Randy Bernard said.

"After weighing a variety of options, we felt it was best to move the race to the road course. We understand that Japan is steadily moving forward with reconstruction."

Hiroshi Oshima, president of Twin Ring Motegi owners Mobilityland Corporation, said restoring the oval was considered but given the cost and other construction needs across the nation, the road course option was chosen.

"Though we have been forced to change what we have been doing by the earthquake disaster, we will make sure our fans experience another exciting race," Oshima said.

The Japan race will be the 15th of 17 races in the IndyCar season, which will now feature only seven oval events for a series that was once oval-only.

Brazil's Helio Castroneves is defending champion and the last IndyCar winner on the oval where US racer Danica Patrick became the first woman to win a major open-wheel series race when she captured her only IndyCar event in 2008.

Matsuzaka out, reportedly eyes surgery

BOSTON, Massachusetts (AFP) – Japanese star pitcher Daisuke Matsuzaka was put on the 60-day disabled list by the Boston Red Sox on Friday even as a report claimed he has decided to have elbow surgery next week.

The Red Sox said Matsuzaka, 3-3 with a 5.30 earned-run average in eight appearances this season, is suffering with a sprained right elbow. He had been put on the 15-day disabled list last month.

But the Boston Globe reported Friday, citing unnamed multiple major league sources, that "Dice-K" has decided to undergo reconstructive right elbow surgery that could sideline the 30-year-old right-hander for at least a year.

Matsuzaka, who is 49-30 with a 4.25 earned-run average since joining the Red Sox before the 2007 season, has a six-year contract worth $52 million that expires after the 2012 season.

In addition to paying his salary, the Red Sox paid Japan's Seibu Lions $51.1 million dollars for the rights to negotiate with Matsuzaka, who in his first North American season helped the Red Sox capture the 2007 World Series crown.

Nowitzki cements NBA legacy with gutsy performance

MIAMI (AFP) – Forget everything you ever heard about Dirk Nowitzki needing a championship to secure his place among the NBA legends.

Nowitzki did just that Thursday by playing through a torn tendon on his left middle finger to score the winning basket and level the NBA finals at one game each.

Nowitzki, who turns 33 on June 19, slipped past Miami's Chris Bosh with 3.6 seconds left and give Dallas an improbable 95-93 win over the favoured Heat on Thursday.

"You play if you are feeling pain," said Mavericks coach Rick Carlisle. "You make yourself numb so you don't feel pain. You got to play and you got to be a warrior."

Ten-time all-star Nowitzki went one step further. He won the game for Dallas which went on a 22-5 run to close it out.

Nowitzki, who essentially spent the last five years answering for his postseason failures, tore the tendon in game one and is expected to wear a protective splint for the rest of the series which switches to Dallas for game three on Sunday.

On Thursday, he finished with 24 points and 11 rebounds for the Mavericks who handed the Heat their first loss at home in the 2011 playoffs.

Carlisle compared the one time league MVP Nowitzki to former Celtic hall of famer Larry Bird.

"I played with Bird for three years when he was the best player in the world," Carlisle said. "Guys like that don't feel pain."

Now the Heat are the only thing standing in the way of Nowitzki and his first NBA championship ring.

"Unbelievable. I don't know how his finger felt but I know he didn't care. He was going to do whatever it took for us to get the win tonight," said teammate Jason Terry.

Germany's Nowitzki played like there was no tomorrow and the last thing the Mavericks wanted is to be down 0-2 in the finals.

"What a huge swing it was," Nowitzki said. "A huge comeback for us. We never gave up."

Terry said he felt the Heat were rubbing their noses in it when Wade drained a three pointer in the fourth to take a 15-point lead and LeBron James and the Miami players started to dance in front of the Mavericks' bench.

"I can't say what was going through my mind," Terry said. "It was the turning point. I looked at Dirk and said 'there is no way we are going out like this'."

"For us to go out in a blowout fashion with them dunking on us, shooting threes on us, it would have been disheartening."

Wade denies that there was any showboating going on.

"There was no celebration," Wade said. "Every team in the league when they go on a run they do something. Whether it is a signal or a chest bump. It is part of the game. A celebration is confetti and champagne bottles."

Ooijer

This week end two Dutch football greats are on the island; namely, Andre Ooijer and Rob Witschge. Both super players are offering clinics to trainers of our local teams. They will also be offering sessions to a select number of our own footballers. The training events began this Friday and will continue thru Sunday at the Frans Figaroa Stadium in Noord.

Minister of Sports, Richard Visser is very pleased that he was able to convince KNVB and the Dutch footballers to come to Aruba and offer clinics to our local players.

The main focus of the training sessions will be on health. Andre Ooijer and his partner Rob Witschge and the other trainers will be sharing their expertise as professional footballers. They will also share advice regarding nutrition to encourage our young players to eat, drink and live healthy.

On Friday, they conducted a training session for local trainers who work with footballers between the 7 to 17 years category.

Furthermore, 125 athletes of different sports, not only footballers, are invited to participate in a special H-Extreme training on June 4th from 9:00am to 4:00 pm at Frans Figaroa Stadium. Rene Wild and his Dutch trainers will conduct this training session. Participation is gratis and includes a healthy lunch.

The general public is invited to come out on Sunday June 5th at 9:00am to the Frans Figaroa Stadium to cheer on our youngsters and to meet with the Dutch champion football players.

The workshop is scheduled for 9:00 to 12:00 noon. During 12:00 to 1:30pm there will be an opportunity to take pictures and interact with the football greats and obtain autographs.

The workshop will resume at 1:30pm and conclude at 4:00 in the afternoon.

Between 4:00 and 6:00pm they will have the semi final and final of the Pannaball bearing the name of "Andre Ooijer Cup 2011."

This activity promises to be a fun filled event of training, and sports in the company of friends and our champion visitors from the Netherlands.

Chavez Jnr seeks title in battle of unbeatens

LOS ANGELES (AFP) - Julio Cesar Chavez Jnr, the son of a Mexican boxing legend, tries to secure his first world title on Saturday against Germany's Sebastian Zbik in a showdown on unbeaten middleweights.

No. 1 contender Chavez, 42-0 with one drawn and 30 knockouts, will challenge World Boxing Council champion Zbik, 30-0 with 10 knockouts, in the same city where his father, a three-division world champion, won his first world title.

"I'm very excited I'm fighting for my first world title in the same city my father won his first world title," Chavez Jnr said. "I know how important this fight is for me and my career."

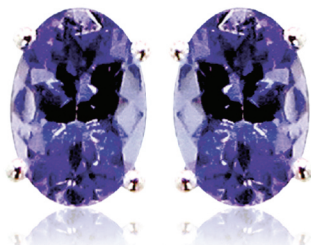

The elder Chavez is set to inducted into the Boxing Hall of Fame later this month.

This will be Zbik's first fight outside Europe and the crowd in the Los Angeles Lakers' home arena figures to be behind Chavez.

"He has a European straight up style and pretty much fights in a straight line," Chavez trainer Freddie Roach said. "Our boxing ability is going to give him a lot of trouble."
